History of the Class of 1930

“COMEDY OF ERRORS”

ACT I

The worst class on record, in fall '26
Rose early, in fact, as early as six.
So determined to see all, hear all, and know all,
Set about to explore those much talked of halls,
G .B. Staples, however, soon assumed control.
First of importance, was at the polls.
We find at the top our good friend Henry Moss,
Alice Barber, Dot Hinckley, and Burlingame, (Corliss)
To guide us thru adventurous '26 - '27.
Coach Del Borah prepared for Linn Wells
Many of the boys who later cast spells
On all the big cities to win our championships.
As Freshmen so lowly, we had nothing to do
But look ahead for next year with, we hope, more to do.

“MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING”

ACT II

And so back to the halls which have now grown so friendly
As sophomores initiate Freshmen, perhaps none too tenderly.
Henry again leads by majority vote
Next is Dot Tuell who, if needed, helps out.
Johnny Green and George Stetson fill remaining two posts
Then both jump ahead to graduate roles.
Small chance at football with those wonders before
Few '30 boys on varsity but helped out that old Football lore.
A championship track team to New Hampshire did go
Including some sophs who could run, jump, or throw.
Basket and baseball, each had its turn
With Sophomores, of course, there to help as they yearned.
Looking forward to next year which is next to the summit
Bid farewell to the school and classmates who love it.

THE HUTTLESTONIAN

---

“AS YOU LIKE IT”

ACT III

Back to the school we have now learned to love
A tanned bunch of Juniors come back in a drove.
Don Tobin a new recruit to our team
Won first place at 'lection—by all our esteem.
Al Whitworth comes along to sit on the shelf
As for secretary—none other than Corl Burlingame himself.
Then to take money is John Kszystyniak
When he comes to collect, we all say, “Go back”.
Indeed, we're on varsities, councils, committees
We e'en run a dance for next year's expenses.
Either on top, or very close to it
Our track team comes home with great credits due it.
Of course, football we know is always so good
So naturally put down that little town of New Bedford.
Not much to do in the business line
We turn to our studies which take most of our time (?)
As for baseball—Oh, we are the champs,
After that to beaches, mountains, and camps.

“ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL”

ACT IV

Behold! we're proud Seniors now returning to studies,
Greet old friends and new friends—e'en Freshmen as buddies,
Back from vacation — the last at this school —
We come back as Seniors, all classes to rule.
Henry Moss captains the eleven as well as the class
And Charlie Gunning runs up second in final pass.
Al Whitworth records while Bill Gallagher's collector.
In football we thought, we'd come out on the top—
But New Bedford claimed that 'cause the league we had dropped.
That old F. H. S. spirit decreased not a bit
For a rousing big banquet proved a wonderful hit.
All officers were Seniors on the Council of Students
As well as Traffic Squad Captains, and a few Lieutenants.
Then dances by seniors, with three up to date
Have added to fun and fund and come thru just great.

A crack track team to Bowdoin, a trip it did take
But, of course, you all heard the record Al Whit happily did make.
The annual play with an all-Senior cast
Upheld old tradition, as long in the past
With excellent coaching, and fine co-operating
We came thru a success, in our great undertaking.
All those taking part in play, or back-stage
Forgetting as "dignified Seniors" their age
Made whoopee in general at Tabitha Inn.
Class meetings are numerous this short busy year,
We all make the best to cherish so dear.
After heated discussions, as oft is the case,
We choose N. B. H. as our banqueting place.

"'Tis grievous parting with good company."

Here's to the school at Fairhaven
The home of the truth and the light
Where good spirit prevails
In every detail
Starting us all to the right.

"I have been forcing my brain to the composition of a few verses in behalf of your entertainment and I never knew them flow so dully from me before."

Frances Tuell, '30.

Farewell Fairhaven High!

They may build grotesquely 'round you, then—
Citadel, cathedral, mosque;
Though the best of Aeons bound you, then—
Pyramid, pagoda, fort;
Though their domes converse with lofty clouds,
Though their turrets dim the sun,
And their walls arrayed like monstrous shrouds,
Over your diminished fame,
Would inwrap with all-obscuring palls
Your ephemeral domain;
And the hum of Garagantuan awls
Would intone your requiem—
Farewell, Fairhaven High!

But in future years we'll scorn all these—
The skyscraper and the church;
We, a gayer choir than drills, will seize
'Pon some less funeral chant,
Swaying to the music of some old
School song, that perpetuates
Memories your spacious halls infold.
Oh! the careless revels there!
Happy were those thoughtless years at play!
We recall with futile pangs
Of increasing longing, that delay
Time's relentless hand, that writes—
Farewell, Fairhaven High!

We regret the sweaty football togs,
And the cinders, and the court;
The complacency of age befogs
Us, we think with tolerant
Fancy of parabolas and sines,
Wooley and tautology,
Latin syntax, Caesar, and supines,
Newton's laws, specific heat,
French irregulars, "La Petite Chose",

THE HUTTLESTONIAN

---

John Brown and his foolish raid,
German fairy tales, impromptu prose;
Now we scribe the closed books—
Farewell, Fairhaven High!

Done the whole scholastic voyage
Seniors crave the Freshman's four-year ease—
Better be an empty sloop
Than a laden ship that's sailed the seas!
We must leave the football field
For more important fields of strife,
And desert the cinder course
For the longer, harder course of Life;
So in other halls, we'll climb
Other, steeper stairs; and some day pla
Greater games. And scribe, "Finis"
Other text-books—but again ne'er say—
Farewell, Fairhaven High!

Philip T. Gidley, '30.

Prophecy of the Class of 1930

*"Men grope t'anticipate
The cabinet designs of fate,
Apply to prophets to foresee
What shall and what shall never be."*

Oh, thou class of 1930 mount the magic carpet, which is today the airplane and come with me to the Utopian Fairhaven of 1945. The approach is through a magnificent avenue and we first pause, in coming in, before an imposing marble statue of Fairhaven's great benefactor, Henry Huttleston Rogers. Below there is a bronze tablet which reads:

"This city as it is today is the product of the combined efforts of the superlative intellect of the class of 1930 of the Fairhaven High School, who continued and completed the work so nobly begun by Mr. Rogers, of making this place a model city."

We take interest immediately and rush to make a thorough tour of inspection of a city which promises so highly. The City Hall is our first stop and we are greeted cordially by Mayor Moss who gladly consents to guide us about to all the important points of interest. Mr. Moss with his sound judgment, hardworking nature, and keen forethought has played a leading role in the establishment of this Utopia.

We first speed to the Sound Airways Flying Field in one of the luxurious cars of the Maxfield Streamline Taxi Company. "Speed" Gunning is our chauffeur. He still has his "fast" nature and carries us there in two minutes flat.

The stunt flying of "Tailspin" Spangenberg, "Aileron" Almy and "Never Thrill" Bauer have been of major importance in making this airport of national reputation. Miss Dorris Tuell bearing the sobriquet of "Lady Lindbergh" has also been a great factor in its success.

We learn that Tobin and Kenny are the principal owners of the field. It is rumored that the two are not always entirely in agreement.

As we stroll along the edge of the field we watch Viscountess De la Smythe née Lawson, volplane gracefully to a ten point landing. By her side sits a distinguished man with a red moustache and goatee. It is none other than Barney Guy who owns all of Fairhaven's "places to meet your friends." What a perfect match!

But it is time to move on. We now taxi to the home of the Great Atlas Tack Corporation. President Burgess made a great success of the industry ably assisted by Mr. Gordon "Daisy" Fawcett, his advertising manager. The latter wrote a little poem entitled "Tax" which drew attention from the entire world because it was so beautiful and tender.

Mr. Burgess has an especially capable office force. Miss Furtado is the president's secretary. Misses Fuller, Goggin, and Olive Ellis handle the affairs of the first three vice-presidents, Messrs. Eugene Soares, Leslie W. Baker, and James Machado.

In the office we also spy the firm's most competent stenographers, Dot Pemberton, Mary Rocha, Mary Days, Elsie Silva, Irene Ellis, and Doris Hinckley. We can tell by watching them, under whose careful supervision they learned the rudiments of stenography.

We next visit the office of the "Fairhaven Sun" Mr. P. T. Gidley, P. L. D., is the editor. The fundamentals he gained in the Fairhaven High School have served him well. Originality is still one of his strong points.

The assistant editor is Miss Priscilla Browne, Mt. Holyoke Graduate and a mental wonder. Miss Frances Tuell and Betty Brown are in the capacity of society editors. They write from personal contact with their subjects.

Mr. Corliss Burlingame serves as a sports editor and puts his inherent fairness and good nature into his work. On the general reporter staff we find Otto Chadbourne, Bill Gallagher and Ed. Perry. A reporter's work is not easy but they are competent and fearless men and carry much of the "Sun" on their strong shoulders. Mr. Whitfield is the staff photographer and can be depended upon to "get his picture" at all times.

We leave the "Sun's" door and journey through the commercial center of the town. We are at once attracted by a large sign bearing the legend "Buy Olson's Socks and Shoes." It is said the business is managed principally by his wife, the former Miss Adeline Tabor.

Hiller and Hiller, Paris Modistes is the sign on the adjacent building. This "shoppe" owes its great success to its attractive manequins "Miss America" Price and Miss Priscilla Gamage. The owners inform us that their two buyers Misses Bessie Freitas and Dot Janes are now in Paris selecting Paquin and Louise Boulanger creations for the summer rush. The taste of these two ladies is universally accepted.

Harriman & Luiz, Interior Decorators is emblazoned in gold leaf on the windows of one of the largest stores. Their showrooms are replete with the latest art creations and fine antiques. Miss Dudley is their female representative and her naturally decorative and artistic character affects many difficult sales.

Strolling down the sidewalk we pass George Pflug and Dorothy Schofield engrossed in conversation. He is probably telling her that since Ed. Wilbur left his sales department to sell automobiles the doughnut business has had a decided slump. This may necessitate a delay in their wedding plans.

Our attention is attracted by a terrific noise from across the way, apparently from "Leach and McLeod, Radio and Television Experts." It appears that Clif has just tried out his latest invention, a static eliminator vacuum tube, and McLeod is adding his roars of laughter to the resultant din.

We move away from the shopping district and approach Music Hall, a gift of Mrs. Diggle (formerly Ruth McCracken) who married the well-known soft drink millionaire. Their lobby is adorned with many works of sculptural art and paintings by the world-renowned Kszystyniak.

Entering the great auditorium we discover that a rehearsal is in progress. The players are the great Sopczenski, concert violinist and Miss Eleanor Coe his equally talented accompanist. This pair is in demand all over the civilized world for their unsurpassed productions.

Attracted by aromas wafted from a nearby restaurant, the "Chez Agnes" we turned, not reluctantly thereto. Entering the charming cafe we heard a familiar giggle and turned to see Lillian Perry who was presiding at the cashier's desk. We were greeted by Miss Broadland, the proprietress and her hostess Grace Goulart.

After a delicious luncheon, efficiently served by Ruth Bradley, and, we are told, prepared by Gertrude Portas we turned to leave. As we made our exit we were accosted by Alyce Barber Shutz of Bedloe's Island who is happily married and Marjorie Snow. Miss Snow is private secretary to Walter Roos, the "Wolf of Wall Street."

For old time's sake, we go into the Millicent Library where all our class spent many hours poring over the reference shelf. The librarian is now Esther Wilson and is assisted by Evelyn Broadbent, Doris Clark and Gladys Eldridge.

Margaret Lowney, who is to be married soon to the cotton expert from New York is seated beside Eleanor Tuell. The latter is studying a work on the ethics of shorthand in preparation for the coming World Shorthand Championship contest. Mrs. Doris Suffern Hadcroft is reading the titles of the seven day works.

The Fairhaven Memorial Hospital next deserves our attention. The master surgeon of this wonderful institution is Walter Kubiak who has more surgical operations to his credit than any doctor in the East. The nurses in the hospital are under the supervision of Miss Glady Braley. Among them are Caroline Tyler, Dorothy Bassett, and Frances Stetson. No wonder an operation is no ordeal!

We are conducted to the entomological research laboratory where Professor Eleanor Fletcher is ruthlessly dissecting the mesothorax and prothorax of insects. Her interested helpers are Betty Alden and Dorothy Clark.

As we retreat in horror, we meet an orderly, Manuel Soares, assisting John Gonsalves to this room. Mr. Gonsalves, football coach at Fairhaven High School is convalescing after an accident suffered during an attempt to secure a pilot's license at the Sound Airways.

It is time to leave our beautiful town so we bid our host farewell. As Gunning drives us down Huttleston Avenue we park to watch Coach Whitworth put his track team through its paces. At the rear of the building we catch glimpses of Miss Anna Sylvia, physical instructor, getting the girls' soccer team into shape to defeat New Bedford, as usual.

Regretfully we remount our magic carpet and speed back to the class of 1930 in the present. If we prophets are wrong in our airplane trip into the future, please excuse us — for as "we know in part so we prophesy in part."

Senior Play from behind the Scenes

Arrayed in the borrowed trench coat in which I was to appear on the stage in the character of a lawyer, I entered the Town Hall with a heart whose beat was to say the least, slightly accelerated. A few minutes of waiting—and then the bustle of getting made up, hastily reviewing rather vague lines, fervent breathless prayers, and the curtain went up.

The shouting effect at the very beginning was difficult to get and that once over I hovered (I hope) unseen behind a partially closed door watching anxiously the performance of my fellow-actors and waiting for my cue. After a few moments of nervousness, experienced so they tell us by every good actor, those on the stage settled down and gave of their best. Skinner and Miss Murray awaiting the arrival of the beloved and yet feared Cappy Ricks, master of the Blue Star Shipping Line were duly introduced to the audience. Cappy made his blustering, good-natured entrance and the performance was fairly started. Then I received my cue and walked on the stage hoping against hope that my knees wouldn't interfere too much with my lines. My first thought while on the stage was, "Thank God for the footlights" for no matter how hard I peered into the audience I could not see beyond the first two rows. I finished my little part and after making my exit ascended to those mysterious unknown regions from whence the curtain is controlled and the drops and things are regulated. The appearance of the personable Miss Florry Ricks heightened the interest and Cecil, the "silly ass", was greeted with discreet chuckles. One by one the actors and actresses made their entrances and exits alternately wiping desperately their moist brows (that make-up and the footlights were rather a hot combination) and smiling delightfully for a now fully appreciative audience. Suddenly the curtain unrolled slowly and then fell, and the first act was over before I realized.

During the orderly confusion of shifting scenery and making ready for the second act, I swallowed thirstily several cups of punch which were in evidence. At length everything was ready and with a final glance around I again ascended to my upper regions. Immediately on the raising of the curtain, one could tell from the murmurs of delight and admiration from our "critics" out front that the second act scenery had caught their fancy even as it had caught ours the first time that we had seen it.

With the beginning of the second act, the play seemed to gain even more impetus and smoothness; and what is more, those who were on the stage for any length of time actually began to enjoy it and to get a good deal of fun from acting. The result can be well and accurately imagined. Ken Campbell's portrayal of Cecil now evoked "honest-to-goodness" roars of laughter from the audience where mere chuckles had sufficed before. As for Skinner and Cappy—that worthy pair was a revelation even to me who had witnessed their acting every day for nearly two months. They brought new and surprising things into their lines and whole-hearted gestures into their acting. From my vantage-point near the roof I enjoyed the acting as much as anyone seeing it for the first time. A real, and very much alive dog strolled leisurely back and forth across the lawn of "Sea-Look", (Cappy's summer cottage) bent upon business of his own. Cappy duly worked himself up to the required frenzy and the curtain descended upon his true-to-life spluttering.

Again I descended to carry out whole stone walls covered with roses and move into place the office for the third and last act. This time my refreshments consisted of a small basket of candy. Once more office walls were tied into place and this time I stayed in the wings ready for the curtain call at the end. During this scene the two love affairs of Cecil and Miss Murray, Matt Peasley and Miss Ricks blossomed forth into happy fulfillment. Peasley, manly and trim in his business suit, successfully bearded the lion in the Blue Star Office, and won the said lion's respect and his daughter. Cecil proved a gale of laughter, and was "good to the last" line. Skinner revealed himself as an old loveable fraud, and Aunt Lucy Ricks, benevolent, goodhearted, and old-fashioned was true to character, with her knitting and breathless wonderment at the actions of this "younger generation."

And so, finally, the wonderful night was over and the play ended with Peasley, radiant and happy, still defying old Cappy. Then, facing the audience in the curtain call, applause for all and bouquets for the young ladies. My make-up had been removed earlier in the evening and in the well-used but sometimes indispensable phrase—"tired, but happy I returned home and to bed."
